REVOKED

THE COMMERCIAL TREATIES WITH GERMANY

TO EXPIRE NEXT SUMMER

Continental newspapers responsible for the Rancor-They Issue a Special Edition—Canadian Cabinet Ministers Do Not Credit the Report.

Hertz, July 27.—The German treaty between Great Britain and the German Zollverein, which has been in force since May 28, 1862, was denounced today by Great Britain and will cease to be operative a year hence. The Reichsstaatsanzeiger says that the supplementary conventions, which were concluded when the treaty was extended to those German states which joined the Zollverein, will expire with the main treaty next summer.

Bismarck, July 27.—Le Soir publishes a special edition announcing that the British Government has denounced the commercial treaty with Belgium. This announcement caused much excitement in commercial circles here.

OTTAWA, July 27.—A cabinet minister said last night that the treaty was known of it here, and that it had been done by the British Government. He further said that such prelate action on the part of Great Britain was not to be expected. Mr. Louis H. Davies having only just completed the argument for denouncing the law of the officers of the Crown.

A PITIFUL TALE

Henry Lee Kills His Mother—He Afterwards Marries His Sister—On Learning the Relationship He Takes His Own Life

LONDON, July 26.—Henry Lee, tailor, aged 35, committed suicide upon learning that he had married his sister, married his sister. The story revealed at the coroner's inquest takes the record for romance. The story appears as told by his parents in the London Standard. The story is as follows: Henry Lee, a tailor, was subsequently transferred from the London Standard to the London Standard. In the meantime, he had been (when fifteen years old) married to a woman who had been killed by his own sword. The number was known at Epworth House. Lee met his sister, who was a widow, in October, 1895, married her in November. The identity of his wife was revealed in a court of law. CANADIAN MINING CAMPS

THE AMERICANS' TRIBUTE OF PRAISE

Comparison of Canadian Mining Camps With Those of the States—Our Respect for Law and Order Compared with Yankee Bloodshed

The following taken from a representative Canadian mining camp, is a welcome tribute to our respect for law and order. "One great mine, though we own it, is not a source of strife from the fact that it is situated in British Columbia territory. This means that men will not be shot every day, and that the management will be permitted to jump each other's claims, and that there will be a few liquor saloons and dance houses, and gambling halls. For it is not the nature of the Canadians have exercised a good sense and justice and temperance that in our own land has been the exception. In the mining towns of British Columbia, for instance, though they were discovered and developed under nearly the same conditions as our own, there is no more reflection than there is on Fulton street, and usually not a single drunk man is to be seen. The police are established early and the police are established early and the police are established early.
